MCWT Foundation President, Marcy Klevorn, has a 26 year career at Ford Motor Company and has been Ford's global director, Information Technology (IT) Infrastructure, since May of 2006. In her current professional role (reporting to Nick Smither, Ford's CIO), Marcy oversees Ford's technical infrastructure, more than 550 data centers, web-hosting requirements, engineering, technical innovation & research and infrastructure services for the entire company.

Previously, Marcy was Ford's director, Enterprise Defragmentation, and led the strategy & implementation for data center consolidation, infrastructure coherence and overall systems management. From 2003 to 2005, Marcy moved into Ford IT as the consulting program manager for the purchasing initiative, eVEREST, leading the analysis and decision to move IT migration back to legacy systems. In 2005, she became global director, Product Lifecycle Management, and spearheaded a business process change in data and information management across product creation.

Beginning her career at Ford in 1983 in Telecommunication Services, Marcy held a number of IT-related positions within Ford IT and Ford Credit through 2003. Among other things, she led the Treasury Systems department, launched a comprehensive securitization system (which diversified company funding for Ford), assisted in the launch of numerous new technologies to improve Ford and supported the launch of eight new Ford Credit Service Centers – the largest system migration in Ford's history. While managing the Custom Branch and Dealer Systems department at Ford Credit, Marcy led the Compass Replacement project. This entailed rewriting one of the largest client server applications world-wide to a J2EE application.

Marcy holds a bachelor's degree from the University of Michigan's Stephen M. Ross School of Business. She participated in the Experienced Leader Challenge (ELC) in 2001. She completed the Global Leadership Summit in March of 2008, which was championed by Ford's President and CEO, Alan Mulally.

In addition to her role in MCWT, Marcy is an enthusiastic supporter of other initiatives to improve careers at Ford. She is an executive sponsor for the Professional Women's Network (PWN), representing IT at Ford. She is also the executive sponsor of the Ford IT Diversity Action Team (ITDAT), the executive sponsor for the Executive Shadowing Program within Ford IT and the executive sponsor for the University of Michigan IT leadership program recruiting at Ford.

Marcy lives in Farmington Hills with her husband and son.
